Why the box works

A pantry brand only gets one window a year to sell a gift, and a gift is a box.

At $38 the average order is a single jar plus shipping, which is a habit purchase.

The box reframes it: three jars, a recipe card and a ribbon, and the same shopper spends $52 without hesitating, because they are no longer buying groceries.

Growth has compounded every month since the storefront relaunched, and none of it came from discounting. The base is real.
